

Local Author raises awareness of dyspraxia and shows generous Business Heart to Bromsgrove art students

Emma Austin-Jones, already a published poet, has written a series of children's books; they are both gentle and informative. They convey a simple and subtle message about friendship overcoming differences, without forcing the issue. Emma has also created a life-changing opportunity for art students at Bromsgrove College who have been invited to enter a competition to illustrate them.

Emma has decided to donate a percentage of the book profits to the Dyspraxia Foundation.
